“Contribute to clean energy production and enjoy cheaper, cleaner solar energy in Malaysia ”

With the Feed-in Tariff (FIT) for Solar PV coming to an end, the Sustainable Energy Development Authority (SEDA) Malaysia, together with Malaysia Energy Commission, has rolled out the net energy metering (NEM) scheme for the corporate sector, an incentive by the government to promote the growth of renewable energy (RE) in the country. Companies in Malaysia not only can now self-generate renewable energy from onsite solar PV systems but NEM allows them to sell the potential excess energy back to the grid.

Join SEDA, the Authority of Sustainable Development Authority of Malaysia, and Cleantech Solar, the leader in rooftop solar development in Asia, to find out how the new Malaysia framework can benefit your operations.

How to leverage no-CAPEX solar options to reduce costs and CO2 emissions?

- ⇒ Build a solar PV systems at zero capital investment
- ⇒ System to be maintained & optimised by Cleantech Solar
- ⇒ Enjoy cheaper and cleaner power.

“Cleantech Solar’s knowledge base is quite wide and they have interacted well with our Health & Safety department and technical team to ensure our operation is not disrupted at all. “Regional Real Estate Manager, Kuehne + Nagel””
